Tower Panel Believes Reagan Knew About Iran Arms Sales

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — The Tower Commission has concluded that President Ronald Reagan, far from being remote from the administration's Iran arms dealings, was briefed on them regularly as they took place, according to officials familiar with the commission's re-

The officials said the report, which is scheduled to be made pubhic on Thursday, would show that Mr. Reagan frequently discussed the Iran initiative at morning meetings with Vice Admiral John M. Poindexter, then his national security adviser.

But the report also says the president's participation in those discussions was minimal. Often he simply asked questions about the American hostages being held in Lebanon and told anecdotes, according to an official who has seen the report.

HONG KONG - Some China watchers based in Hong Kong have concluded that Deng Xiaoping. China's senior leader, has been severely weakened in the recent political turnoil in Beijing and may no longer exercise real power.

Mr. Deng, who twice rose from political oblivion in the 1970s, bas been the principal force behind the economie restructuring that China

Astronomers Say They've Found Closest Supernova Since 1604

By Malcolm W. Browne New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Astronomers report that the explosion of a star has apparently occurred much closer to Earth than any since the one observed by the astronomer Kepler

The discovery of the supernova was made Tuesday.

Because such nearby supernovas are so rare, and because it is being observed so early, the event is likely to have a dramatic impact on understanding how such explosions come about and how they have influenced the chemical composition of the universe.

WORLD BRIEFS

U.K. Urged to Act on 6 Nazi Suspects LONDON (UPI) — Members of Parliament urged the government Wednesday to act against at least six suspected Nazi criminals who took sanctuary in Britain after World War II.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd disclosed that an investigation prompted by the Simon Wiesenthal Institute of Los Angeles found that at least six suspected Nazis live in Britain.

They were among 17 names provided by the institute in October as being guilty of crimes in 1940 against Jews in Nazi-occupied Lithuania and Latvia in what is now Soviet territory. Mr. Hurd said the investigation was continuing but that the crimes were committed before the suspects came to Britain.

Abdallah Called 'Small' Terror Chief

PARIS (AP) - A senior French counterintelligence official said Wednesday that he doubted Georges Ibrahim Abdallah is the bead of the terrorist group blamed for killing American and Israeli diplomats in Paris.

Mr. Abdallah, on trial on charges of complicity in anuder and attempted murder, often has been described by the police and terrorism experts as the head of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions, or FARL, which claimed responsibility for the attacks.

But Raymond Nart, deputy director of the counterintelligence agency DST testified that he considered Mr. Abdallah at best a "smell chief," not the group's overall head. "As to the real head of FARL, I have several ideas," Mr. Nart said. He added that he thought Mr. Abdallah was "the head of a commando team; he's a little chief." Offers Hand,

U.S. High Court Backs Rights Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court upheld on Wednesday a plan for promoting equal numbers of blacks and whites on the Alabama State Police force.

By a vote of 5-4, the court roled that the affirmative action plandid not violate the U.S. Constitution. The plan forces the state police to promote one black trooper for every white promoted until blacks comprise 25 percent of upper-rank officers.

The ruling is a defeat for the Reagan administration, which argued that the quota was "profoundly illegal." The administration argued that the plan was arbitrary and a form of reverse discrimination that violates the equal protection guarantees contained in the constitution.

Zambia Releases 4 South Africans

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — Four South Africans who were held for nine months in Zambian jails on charges of spying returned home Wednesday. Their lawyer demed Zambia's allegations that the four had been spying for Pretoria.

President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said earlier that he was releasing the four on humanitarian grounds, although he said they had admitted working for South African intelligence at the time of their arrest in May. They were held a week after South African planes raided alleged antiapartheid guerrilla targets in Lusaka, the Zambian capital.

Mr. Kannda said at a press conference that the men - Randolph Keyser, Rudolf Otterman, Bernhardt Koch and Duncan Vanse - had planned their trip to Zambia as genuine tourists but were later persuaded by South African agents to carry out acts of destabilization. The four were met on their arrival by Foreign Minister R.F. Botha.

Gene Defect Linked to Mental Illness

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of manic-depressive disease in three generations of a family has shown for the first time that delective genes can cause psychiatric disorders, and scientists say the finding could help them understand a wide range of mental illness.

"It's an extremely important opening into molecular genetics and molecular biology for the major mental disorders," said Dr. Darrel Regier of the National Institute of Mental Health.

The work should promote studies that lead to better understanding of such illnesses as schizophrenia and anxiety disorders, he said. Previous studies had suggested that genetics could contribute to psychiatric worker who escaped from the camp disorders. Vietnam Says Troops Lack Necessities

Getty Museum Sets Another Record

By Souren Melikian mational Herold Tribus PARIS - The J. Paul Getty Museum has paid a record $4.07 million at Sotheby's in New York for "The Farewell of Telemachus and Eucharis," a mythological picture painted in 1818 by Jacques-Louis David. The sale on Tuesday illustrates the increasing competition in the museum world, particularly in the United States, for famous names, no matter what kind of work these may be attached to. David, who became famous in his own time as the leader among French artists cultivating the Neo-Classical style, is, to this day, widely considered the most remarkable artist of that school in France. A militant leftist under the French Revolution and, later, an ardent supporter of Napoleon, he painted two of the bestknown paintings relating to major contemporary events: "Le Serment du Jeu de Paume" and "Le Sacre de Napoleon." Both are hanging in French museums. It is for such pictures that David has been sought after in the last

The ruling by Judge Thomas

The ruling followed reports that Mr. Deaver, o close friend of President Ronald Reagan, has been warned that he must plead guilty to criminal charges or face indictment

People with knowledge of the investigation told The New York Times on Tuesday that the independent counsel, or special prose-cutor, in the case, Whitney North Seymour Jr., had asked that Mr. Deaver plead guilty to two felony counts. Routine AIDS Test Questioned in U.S.

By Lawrence K. Altman New York Times Service

ATLANTA - A consensus apseared to be emerging against videspread mandatory testing for nfection with the AIDS virus as American public health officials met this week to discuss ways to curb the spread of the deadly viral

The Centers for Disease Control, the main federal agency charged with tracking the spread of epidemics, called the meeting Tuesday and Wednesday in explore expanded uses of blood tests for infection with the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Officials called for discussion of the possible value of requiring testing of, for example, all patients entering hospitals, all pregnant women and all applicants for marriage licenses.

Many people interpreted that suggestion as an indication that the federal government would actually propose such testing requirements.
Opposents said such testing would be vulnerable in breaches of confidentiality. They also contend ed that it would be too broadly applied and might drive people most at risk from AIDS away from the health care system. AIDS is caused by a virus that cripples the immune system, leav-ing patients vulnerable to infec-tions and cancers. More than four out of five cases registered so far in the United States have involved homosexual or bisexual men or intravenous drug users.

Scientists do not know what portion of infected people will develop the disease, but they presume that all carriers of the virus can spread it in others through sexual inter-course, exchanges of blood or from mothers to newborns.

Dr. James O. Mason, the agency's director, insisted Tuesday that whatever testing did take place should be accompanied by strong legal protection against disclosure of the identities of people infected with the AIDS virus.

Dr. James W. Curran, who heads the AIDS program at the Centers for Disease Control, said at the meeting that strategies against the disease would have to be tailored to local conditions because of the disparities in infection rates among men and women and according to geographical and age factors.

For example, he said that in the states with the highest rates of infection, 3.34 percent of all men were estimated to be infected, lo the states with the lowest rates of infection, the rate was only seven one-hundredths of 1 percent.

In the presentations and panel discussions Tuesday, there was broad consensus against mandatory or even routine testing for patients entering hospitals, pregnant women and applicants for marriage licenses.

Dr. Stephen Joseph, New York City's health commissioner, said at a oews conference here that he had not heard a single public health official at the conference advocate mandatory testing for hospital patients or premarital screening.

"What's he going to say from here "The drift or trend has been in another direction," he said, adding, "There needs to be a very largescale increase in the availability and accessibility of counseling and testing" on a voluntary and confi-

■ French Will Let Addicts Buy Syringes

Pharmacies in France will be allowed in sell syringes without prescription in a one-year experiment to fight AIDS among drug users, The Associated Press reported from Paris.

Health Minister Michèle Barzach, announcing the plan Tuesday, said the government would suspend a 1972 decree permitting syringe sales only with prescription or after an identity check. "It is not a matter of giving up the fight against drug addiction," she said. "But we have to be realistic, 50 to 80 percent of drug addicts are infected."

Dr. Claude Olivenstein, director of a drug treatment center in Paris, said the decision to lift restrictions on syringe sales was "courageous missile-defense test, scheduled in 1988, could lead to early deploy-ment of a space-based shield against ballistic missiles, according to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

By John H. Cushman Jr. New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — A crucial

Mr. Weinberger, in an interview Tuesday, said that the test, involving the destruction of a target in a collision with a prototype rocket. could best be carried out ooder a broadly permissive interpretation of the 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty limiting such tests.

It was the first time that Mr. Weinberger had identified a specific test that could be accomplished under a oew interpretation of the ABM treaty. Such a test, he said, could lead to deployment as early as 1993 or 1994.

His remarks oo Tuesday came amid growing indications of strong opposition in the Senate to the reinterpretation of the ABM treaty.

The planned test would be the second in a series that began in September 1986. At that time, two separated stages of a Delta rocket were maneuvered into a collision in an experiment that was hailed as a breakthrough by the Defense Department but criticized as a treaty violation by opponents of the missile-defense plan.

Mr. Weinberger asserted that the ABM treaty, under the new interpretation, would allow development and testing of a wide variety those based in space. In his view, any technology that was not actually incorporated in anti-missile rockets, launchers or sensors of the sort that existed when the treaty was signed in 1972 is exempted from the prohibition on testing.

This is the broadest view yet put forth of the treaty reinterpretation, which has become the focus of arms control ocgotiations. It is an interpretation that some other Senate majority leader, said that arms control experts in the Reagan interpretation of the treaty. Mr.

remain uncertain pending a decisioo on the interpretation of the treaty.

He said the coming experiment in space could be carried out under the existing, strict interpretation of the treaty only if key elements of the test were omitted so that the prototype weapon being tested did not actually hit its target.

On Friday, Lieutenant General James A. Abrahamson, the director of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, said in an interview that he had decided to omit the actual interception from the test, officially known as Delta 181.

Mr. Weinberger has been a leading proponent within the administration of moving speedily toward deploying a first phase of the space-based defense. Other adminstration officials, including State Department officials, have argued that the issue oeeds further study and that allies and the Coogress need to be consulted before any new interpretation is adopted. However, Mr. Weinberger said Tuesday that his views were also held by Mr. Reagan.

"A lot of people think we have not decided to do this," he said. The president wants to deploy."

He said the earliest date for initial deployments of a partial dewhich would be based on a series of interceptors based on land and in space, would be in 1993 or 1994. He noted that no matter how the ABM treaty was interpreted, it would have to be abandoned in of defensive systems, including order to deploy space-based defenses.

As Mr. Weinberger spoke, two key senators asserted that they had woo a promise from the administration to consult closely with the Congress before changing the legal interpretation of the ABM treaty.

Byrd, Democrat of Virginia, the The Pentagon has been asked to give President Ronald Reagan a list of experiments that could be accomplished only under the line administration had agreed to long consultation with the Senate before making a final decision on the interpretation of the treaty. Reagan Can't Remember Ten weeks ago, White House aides bridled at the joke about the Iran-contra crisis: What did President Ronald Reagan forget and when did he forget it? As things have turned out, it was no joke.

Did he approve the first shipment of arms to Iran in 1985? He cannot remember, he genninely cannot remember, according to a senior official. Mr. Reagan himself con-curred in that proposition Tuesday. "It's possible to forget," he said, asking a group of visitors if any could remember what they were doing on Aug. 8, 1985. None could.

But it is not likely that any of his guests had been called on to do anything as bizarre, contrary or indelible as for Mr. Reagan to approve arms shipments to Iran. Iran! Why, just a month before, on July 8, as noted by James Schlesinger, the former defense secretary, Mr. Reagan had called Iran a prime example of "outlaw states run by the stranger of collection of miffit. I control Thomas and est collection of misfits, Looney Tunes and squalid criminals since the advent of the Third Reich." It may be possible to forget approving arms for misfits, Looney Tunes and squalid criminals, but the claim is no more reassuring than any of the accounts the president and his men have provided since the scandal began, yielding circles within circles as each account has broken down.

There is reason to believe that the original decision to deal with Iran, contrary to all antiterror pronouncements, was prompted by a reckless desire to free hostages. When the enterprise was exposed, the primary re sponse evident among the president's men was to disguise it. As that effort failed, everything seemed to focus on rationing out statements or correctives, one every few days.

Meanwhile the White House turned from bully pulpit into whirlpool, churning around an apparent gap at the center. The president's State of the Union address could have been a nationally televised platform for the regret and renewal the country would have welcomed. It came out sounding like a regun. Meanwhile, old hands who might once have rallied round the president are themselves under investigation: Mi-chael Deaver, Lyn Nofziger. Meanwhile, other aides are bailing out: Pat Buchanan, Larry Speakes, Mitchell Daniels. And recruiting replacements becomes difficult.

Meanwhile, there is concern about Mr. Reagan's strength. Three months after his last news conference and seven weeks after his prostate surgery he remains largely shielded from reporters' questions.

Meanwhile, the White House is consumed with bickering, scapegoating, finger-pointing. It was all Oliver North's doing, or John Poindexter's. Blame William Casey. Question Robert McFarlane. Fire Donald Regan. Fudge the facts. Each inflamed voice urges the same priority: Evade the blame. There is only one sure way to do that: Govern the country.

Brazil Versus the Banks

Brazil's moratorium on its interest payments brings the international game of chicken over Latin American debts to a new and dangerous phase. In this test of wills and nerves, each side has a great deal to lose if it overplays its position. If Brazil treats its obligations recklessly, it will be cut off from all further foreign credit, with dire economic consequences for President José Sarney's government from which no amount of nationalistic chest-thumping can rescue it. As for the banks that are Brazil's creditors, their situation is better than when the crisis began. They have had time to accumulate reserves against these debts. But that seems to have made some of them arrogant and inflexible. In particular, Citicorp of New York, head of the lenders' committee, has carried its intransigence, and its insistence on the last nickel, to a point that has begun to draw sharp objections from the Reagan administration.

Brazil is not an isolated case. The banks agreed in principle to the Mexican refinancing nearly five months ago, but have yet to come up with the money. The same banks, with Citicorp apparently in the lead again, another eighth of a point in interest.

The banks might usefully reflect that profiting mightily from these loans. they have a lot at stake in Washington these days. If, to take the worst case, Congress should decide a couple of years from now that the banks were collectively responsible for a collapse of a struggling new democratic government in Brazil, those banks will have difficulty persuading anyone in Con-gress that they are fit to hold the broad new powers for which they are now lobbying.

But Brazil has responsibilities as well. It will not help to get sentimental over that country's distress, which is largely self-inflicted. Brazil has used more than $100 billion of the world's savings to build dams, factories, railroads and all the rest. Those investments were, in general, good ones and can repay the lenders. President Sarney says defiantly that Brazil is entitled to grow. That is true, but is not the issue. Brazil grew last year at a phenomenal rate, perhaps 12 percent. Its spectacularly successful export drive has faded because Mr. Sarney has been trying to buy popularity with grossly inflation-ary wage increases. The goods being sold abroad two years ago now are being con-sumed at home. Brazil's inability to make its debt payments is the result of its internal economic troubles, not the cause of them.

'Punto Final' to Justice

Some of the most notorious torturers and commanders of Argentina's "dirty war" have now been granted amnesty. A historic process of legal accountability begun on the basis of clear principle has been transformed into an unsatisfying and potentially dangerous mess. President Raul Alfonsin, who deserves most of the credit for that noble beginning, also deserves most of the responsibility for this unseemly "punto final," or full stop. In 1983, as the newly elected president, he bravely defied the military when be insisted on trials. The generals, humbled by defeat in the Falklands, still held key levers of power. Mr. Alfonsin understood that democracy required accounting for the 9,000 or more who were killed in the seven-year dirty war. Former junta members and police commanders were convicted and sentenced.

But eventually, despite strong public support for continued prosecution, Mr. Alfonsin changed tack, heeding the pleas of the military and the civilian right. Last December, citing a desire for national reconciliation and a supposed military threat, he pushed a law through the Argentine Congress that set tight timetables for filing and resolving thousands of unprosecuted cases. To their credit, courts suspended scheduled recesses and have produced, thus far, a surprising 150 further summonses to trial.

Beyond these and a few special cases to be resolved in coming weeks, no new charges or investigations will be considered.

Paradoxically, the pragmatic goals for which principle was sacrificed have not been achieved. Some 30 active-duty officers were included by the courts among the last cases. This was the right decision, but it could also ignite the military danger. And cynicism, not reconciliation, is the most likely response to seeing so much evil go unpunished.

When Mr. Alfonsin insisted on trials for the uniformed criminals of the dirty war, he did much to strengthen the spirit of a country that had reached the brink of moral devastation. Sadly, his "punto final" dilutes this remarkable achieve

The Peres-Shamir Dispute

A row, perhaps a pseudo-row, has broken out again in Israel about the form that negotiations with the Arabs should take. It was aggravated Monday by a statement from the foreign ministers of the 12 European Community member states that supports the position of Shimon Peres against that of his prime minister, Yitzhak Shamir. Mr. Peres, now foreign minister under the rotation agreement, arrived Wednesday in Cairo for further talks about the process and already has agreed in principle that the forum should be an international conference with both superpowers present. Mr. Shamir strongly resists this approach and has publicly threatened that the dispute could bring down the coalition.

Apart from Mr. Shamir and his Liked colleagues only the United States is opposed to a conference under UN supervision, and the U.S. objections might well be overcome by tact on the Soviet side and persuasion on the European. Mr. Shamir opposes anything other than direct talks with Jordan and others. But the difference between his position. and that of Mr. Peres is not as great as it seems. Neither is willing to negotiate directly with the Palestinians, except those of their own choosing, which is why President Ronald Reagan's Middle East peace plan has gotten nowhere. Direct negotiation, however disprised, would be needed even at a UN conference. The United States has sent envoys on the Middle East shuttle countless times to bring together a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation acceptable to Israel. But U.S. standing in the region is at an all-time low. Mr. Shamir has little reason, on this score, to fear for the survival of his coalition. - The Guardian (London).

West Should Hope Gorbachev Prevails, but Not Help

By Michel Tatu

PARIS — Most Western governments and observers now are convinced that Mikhail Gorbachev is serious when he calls for the "restructuring" of Soviet succept and a new way of thinking by Communist leaders. In the past two months, we have seen Kremlin watchers the world over rushing to review their appraisal of Soviet policy after a long period of skepticism. Let us hope that was will not jump from one extreme to the other.

Since Mr. Gorbachev & genuinely trying to modernize the Soviet system through "openness" and a little more democracy, the question is being raised whether the West should help him in this effort. And if so, how Is Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the West German foreign minister, right when he says we should try to "infinence the evolution in the U.S.R. and participate in its implementation" in order to accelerate it? The debate is open. Let me contribute some tentative, and contradictory, observations.
First, for anyone who believes in the Western values of democracy and phiralism, what is happening in the Soviet Union today is a more pleasant sight than anything that happened un-der Stalin or Brezhoev, and more exciting than the non-events of the period of "ossification" under Konstantin Chemenko. Thus, we cannot resist a feeling of sympathy for Mr. Gorbachev. The second observation, however, points in the opposite direction. Since it is obvious that stroying the Communist system but merely wants to make it more effective, would it not be We conclude therefore, by a score of two to safer in the long run — in view of the expansionist nature of Marxist ideology — to live with an "ossified" and conservative Communist bureaucracy of the Brezhnev-Chernenko type than with a modernized and dynamic Soviet Union? In the apparation of the Brezhnev-Chernenko

Soviet Union? In the economic realm, assuming that Mr. Gorbachev succeeds, would we prefer the competition of a new Soviet superpower to the perpetuation of a permanently underdeveloped consumer of Western industrial goods and wheat? Let us not forget that even a westernized Russia, by her sheer superpower weight, would still be a problem for Europe. and in particular for her neighbors, just as the United States is a problem for Latin America.

The third observation qualifies the first and second. If a totalitarian system opens itself even partially and chooses economic reforms, it tends to moderate its foreign policy. Domestic change needs a peaceful environment and is hardly compatible with militarism or expansionism. China, for instance, improved her relations with most nations, including the Soviet Union, during the period of reforms of the past few years. This is also the view of Andrei Sakharov, who has been quoted as saying that "a more open and democratic Soviet

This is the first of two articles. We conclude therefore, by a score of two to one, that what Mr. Gorbachev is doing is good. even though it is clear it is not enough. Can he be helped to move further in his chosen direction? Here some other remarks have to be made.
First, there is little that can be done. The Soviet system is designed to function independently of the forces that are not an integral part of it. Propaganda aside, neither the Soviet population at large nor any foreign power is permitted to influence it. This has been true especially in the economic field. Attempts by Western governments to change the political course of the Soviet Union through economic concessions have been just as fruitless as foreign economic sanctions.

Secondly, foreign support or official sympa-thy for any Soviet leader will always be counter-productive. The old Lenin quote which says that "if the enemy is praising you, it means you have made a mistake" still has currency in Moscow. Many of the good things Western officials already have said about Mr. Gorbachev are likely to have aided his conservative opponents in the party apparatus who have nicknamed him "the Soviet Dubcek," after the ill-fated leader of the Prague Spring in 1968.
Third, one may wonder whether the question of "helping" Mr. Gorbachev should be asked at all. The chief objective of any government must be to look after its own national interests, not attempting to influence others. have only an indirect bearing on international relations. If, in arms control negotiations, the West were to make concessions to the Soviet Union merely out of a desire to strengthen Mr. Gorbachev and help him stay in power, it would jeopardize the progress we have seen so far. Mr. Gorbachev has changed his position in some of the disarmament talks not because the West encouraged him to do so but because his previous positions were rejected.

Under Brezhnev, for instance, the Kremlin tried to extract more favorable conditions on the SALT 1 and 2 arms accords by using a similar argument: that the West should be kind to the 'good' Brezhnev, or you will have to deal with the 'bad' generals." Coding to this argument would be the worst possible use that could be made of kremlinology, whose sim is not to find recipes for action but, more modest-ly, a better understanding of the facts. So the answer to the question of belping Gorbachev is "No." But this does not prevent

Reagan Is Erring Badly in Backing Iran

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, though publicly proclaiming its arms delivery to Iran to have been an aberration of policy, tells us by its continued overtures to so-called moderates in Iran that its passion has oot abated.

Even in acknowledging that "mis-takes have been made." President Ronald Reagan has chosen conspicuously not to disavow his courtship of Iranians. His administration, unapologetic about its surreptitious exercise of policy, seems to have adjusted to the prospect of an Iranian victory over Iraq in the seven-year Gulf war. The administration justilies a shift away from its pro-Iraq stance by citing Moscow's designs upon Iran, the largest country in the Gulf region. Its aim is to conx Iran back to the Western camp after the death of its leader, the 86-year-old Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. But what Mr. Reagan and those around him fail to appreciate is that revolutionary Iran is defiantly aligned neither with the West nor the East. It sees itself as a new and dynamic force, carrying the banner of Islam in world affairs. This perception is unlikely to change during the current regime, with or without Mr. Khomeini.

The White House seems to perceive Iran as just another Third World nation, but that would be a mistake. Unlike other Third World nations, fran's primary goal is not economic development but ideological and territorial expansion. In that sense, it is a classic imperial state. That is what its war against Iraq is all about.

Should Iraq fall, there is nothing, as long as Washington remains an impotent bystander, to prevent Iran from extending its control over the entire region. The Gulf states by themselves ve no way of stopping Iran's armies. Without unequivocal U.S. support, they are unlikely even to try. Make no mistake: Once Iran controlled the Gulf, it would become a major power — despite poverty and underdevelopment — promoting its dogma on an increasingly wider stage. would have dominion over half the globe's oil reserves, which would mean the oil price, to $50 a barrel.

It would provide money, leadership and dynamism to fundamentalist movements throughout the Middle East Directing local militias rather than its own army, Iran could turn the region into a satellite bloc, stamping out U.S. influence altogether.

Mr. Delors has announced that to cope with the demands of the Common Agricultural Policy and the vari-ous industrial, social and regional support programs, a new ceiling of 2 percent of VAT, equivalent to f.4 percent of the EC countries gross national products, is needed. That hike, of almost a third in the EC budget, to nearly 60 billion Eurodolars a year, also would help defuse north-south tensions inside the Common Market by boosting the incomes of Mediterranean farm workers. His demands have sparked a furor. "Trim the agricultural policy's ex-travagant farm subsidies," scream the British, French and West German governments. Those three are entitled to be worried, because they are the EC's only net budget contributors. But they also are its major recipients. Paris, Bonn and London must therefore decide in conjunction with the others what sort of EC they want. Do they wish to switch money from the farms to the factories? Or do they want to spend money on both?

Aquino Marks Revolt By Urging Army to Defend Democracy

By Keith B. Richburg Vashington Past Service MANILA - President Corazon

C. Aquino, speaking Wednesday on the anniversary of last year's revolt, praised the military for its role in toppling President Ferdinand E. Marcos, but she urged the army to to turn its attention to protecting the country's democra-Cy.

The military's refusal to turn against the people was a feat wor-thy of admiration," said Mrs. Aquino, whose campaign for the presidency last year galvanized a nation in opposition to Mr. Marcos's authoritarian rule.

"You disobeyed the dictator in obedience to the higher call of freedom," Mrs. Aquino said, "and for that, you will be rewarded."

On Feb. 22 last year, a small faction of the military announced it was withdrawing support from Mr. Marcos and recognizing Mrs. Aquino as the winner of the presidential election. At the urging of Cardinal Jaime Sin, the powerful archbishop of Manila, more than a million citizens surrounded the two military camps the rebels con-trolled and blocked government tanks from entering.

Four days later, under mounting military defections and pressure from U.S. officials, Mr. Marcos ded to Hawaii in exile. He left behind a powerful military estabhishment demoralized after years of acting as his personal security

Since the revolt, some factions in the military have considered the army a a kingmaker of the civilian government that keeps Mrs. Aquino off balance under the constant threat of a coup.

"Our people turned to defend your lives," Mrs. Aquino said during a flag-raising ceremony at Camp Agrinaldo, site of the rebeltion. "It is now your part to defend their freedom.

Vice President Salvador H. Laurel was more blunt in his speech largely directed at the military.

Mr. Laurel said one of the lessons of the revolution was that "the military must always uphold civilian rule and must never wrest power for themselves." The revolution. he said, demonstrated "a reversal of roles," since "survival of the military depended on the people."

Mr. Cordovez said the timetable for the Soviet troop withdrawal was ABM: the only question remaining after almost five years of negotiations, which are called "proximity talks" because the delegations meet separately, with Mr. Cordovez sbuttling between them.

"If that blank is filled, we will have a settlement," he said, noting that the withdrawal issue remained difficult because both sides deeply distrust each other. But Mr. Cordovez said that both sides had promised him they would examine the timetable question with an open mind. At earlier stages of the talks, Afghanistan proposed that the Soviet withdrawal be completed in four years, white Pakistan proposed four months.

Preliminary analysis at the new site indicates that the underground chambers were probably the burial place of several of Ramses's many sons. Although the huge central room is badly damaged and filled almost to the ceiling with rubble, its size and design — 100 feet on all sides and supported by 16 large pillars — suggests to archaeologists the grandeur of the 66-year reign of Ramses II, who ruled from 1290 to 1224 B.C. So, encouraged by Dr. Weeks, he hired the Weston Geophysical Corp. of Westboro, Massachusetts, to conduct the field work last year.

All we can say is, we'll cross our fingers that there's a significant discovery to be made." The Berkeley group plans to re-turn in the spring for a more de-tailed study of the tomb, including the chambers that join the main room. They will be looking for inscriptions that provide a reliable date for the tomb.

"Our best guess, based on its location near the tomb of Ramses II and aspects of its design, is that it belonged to Ramses II and was probably for two or three of his sons," Dr. Weeks said. Ramses II built the magnificent temples of

Dr. Weeks cautioned against expecting the unexplored chambers to contain anything like the splen-dor found in Tutankhamen's tomb. In King Tut's time, a century earlier, tomb entrances were less conspicuous in design and often put in out-of-the-way places so that they were less likely to have been badly vandalized. Even before European arrived, most of the later tombs had been robbed of gold, minimies and even building stones.

Dr. Weeks said he would leave the detailed exploration of the tomb to other archaeologists. His group has at least three more years of work on the map and inventory of the catire Thebes area. IN BRIEF

Drug Found Useful in Treating Liver

BOSTON (UPI) - A drug commonly used for cancer treatment produced "dramatic" results when used to treat two patients suffering from one type of non-malignant liver disease, according to researchers. While the results indicate the drug methotrexate may offer the first effective treatment for at least one type of liver disease, the researchers stressed that more study is needed to confirm the findings.

"Liver disease is notoriously fickle," said Dr. Marshall Kaplan, who treated the patients at the New England Medical Center in Boston. In the February issue of the Annals of Internal Medicine, Kaplan and his colleagues reported the results of using methotrerate to treat two patients. with primary sclerosing cholangitis.

The disease is a progressive, untreatable form of liver disease that affects an estimated 5,000 people in the United States. Patients usually die of liver failure if they do not undergo a transplant.

Computer Aids Transplant Program

LEIDEN, Netherlands (AP) - Dr. Bert Groenewood and his colleagues here use a computer that rapidly matches vital organs to people awaiting transplant operations in the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, West Germany and Austria.

Dr. Groenewoud and his team play a role in about 3,800 organ transplants a year, although they rarely see the inside of an operating room. Their Eurotransplant Foundation uses the computer to make quick matches for hearts, lungs, kidneys, livers, pancreases and corners of people who have just died.

In its computer records, Eurotransplant lists genetic information and the blood types of patients awaiting transplants, along with how long a patient has been waiting for the operation, and how urgently it is needed.

Back Muscle Enlisted to Aid Heart

PHILADELPHIA (Reuters) — A revolutionary heart pump fashioned from a patient's own muscle could someday aid thousands of people at a fraction of the cost of transplants, according to the doctor who has developed the device.

The device has been tested in laboratory animals, including a dog who lived almost three months with an auxiliary heart pump fashioned from his own back muscle. The dog died after clots damaged his bidney — a problem that has cropped up with other artificial heart techniques.

But Dr. Larry Stephenson of the University of Pennsylvania, who has collaborated on his research with Swedish and British scientists, said he had several possible ways of solving the problem, including using an anticoagulant to prevent clotting.

The key to the procedure, he said, is conditioning muscle from the back or some other part of the body to behave like heart muscle. The procedure, which Dr. Stephenson expects to be tested in humans within a lew years, involves surgically moving back muscle to a patient's chest.

Tests Set on Male Contraception

SEATTLE (NYT) - Beginning this spring, up to 400 men in countries around the world will begin to test a synthetic form of the male hormone testosterone as a form of birth control. Researchers hope its use for contraception will rival the condom in effectiveness and acceptance. In the first clinical testing of the method, the men will receive the njections once a week for a year. Unlike in previous tests, they would use the injections as their sole source of birth control. Dr. C. Alvin Paulsen, a professor of medicine at the University of Washington here, has been testing the method in the laboratory and on animals since 1972. The new tests will be conducted in the United States, England, China and other nations selected by the World Health Organization, an agency of the United Nations.

WALL STREET WATCH

Kidder Unlikely to Cast A Long Shadow Over GE

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

New York Times Service

EW YORK — Shares of General Electric Co. took a bumpy ride last week, first hitting a record high of $103.75 and then finishing at $101 for a net loss of $2.50. The sudden downturn reflected investor concern that GE might face liabilities because of its 80 percent ownership of Kidder, Peabody & Co., an investment firm that has been linked to allegations of insider trading.

Most Wall Street analysts are optimistic about the prospects for GE's stock, which rose $1.625, to $102, on Tuesday, and they tend to doubt there will be further market repercussions because of the Kidder, Peabody affair. "Any worst-case scenario involving Kidder, Peabody is already reflected in the stock price," said Nicholas P. Heymann of Drexel Burnham mann of Drexel Burnham Lambert. He said that GE re-believe GE is on the mains "a compelling buy."

E. Robert Quasman of Oppenheimer & Co. said, "While threshold of another major concerns about GE's Kidderacquisition. related exposure could continue to cast a pall on the stock near term, we continue to believe GE's stock is more attractive than the market and would regard any current weakness as an opportunity to add to positions.

Both analysts predicted higher profits for GE, which earned $5.46 a share last year. For the first quarter of 1987, Mr.

$5.46 a share last year. For the first quarter of 1987, Mr. Heymann projects earnings at $1.39 a share, up from $1.18 in the comparable 1986 period. His full-year estimates call for $6.50 a share in 1987 and $7.75 in 1988. Mr. Quasman's projections are more conservative, at $6.35 a share this year and $7.40 next year. "Long-term prospects are enhanced by General Electric's increasing emphasis on service businesses," Standard & Poor'a stock reports say, "and its superior management and product leadership." GE's shares hit record highs early last week after the company proposed a two-for-one split and said it would consider raising the cash dividend to a yearly rate of $2.64 a physic of a proper raising the cash dividend to a yearly rate of $2.64 a share, on a pre-split basis, from the current $2.52.

"Fundamentally, we anticipate future announcements will remain positive," Mr. Quasman said, and "GE will increase its quarterly dividend again in November." At current market prices, the stock yields about 2.5 percent.

LTHOUGH the issue has advanced 40 percent since October, Mr. Heymann envisages a target price of $129 to $134 a share over the oext six to 12 months. Looking further ahead, he says he believes a price of $150 a share is attainable in the next 18 to 24 months.

The latter target will become even more readily attainable," he added, "if our belief that GE is on the threshold of another major acquisition proves true." Such an acquisition, carrying an estimated value of $5 billion to $10 billion, could be announced before the middle of this year, Mr. Heymann suggested.

Among the factors conducive to an acquisition, he said, are GE's "very solid" finances, with cash and marketable securities alooc totaling $2.3 billion, and attractive borrowing rates. The giant company, whose operations range from consumer products and industrial systems to aircraft engines and technical products, completed its acquisition of RCA Corp. in June, the same month it acquired control of Kidder, Peabody. Mr. Heymann's theory is that any future major aimed at cohancing the value of GE's stock could be made in a new area. "GE's management has the talent for unlocking real asset values in other companies," he said. "After five years of aggressively revamping its own operations, GE has emerged as one of the best restructurers in the world."

One acquisition technique used by the company in the past is to play on a cycle. When GE acquired Employee Reinsurance Corp. in 1984, it was a timely play on the upturn in the property-casualty business. "Also, in the RCA acquisition," Mr. Heymann said, "the company got NBC - an attempt to play the coming deregulation of the network industry."

Britain Blocks Sugar Bid

Rules Out Offers By Ferruzzi, Tate

LONDON — The government Wednesday blocked rival bids by Gruppo Ferruzzi of Italy and Tate

Gruppo Ferruzzi of Italy and Tate & Lyle PLC of Britain to take over British Sugar PLC, which has a monopoly on the country's sugar beet refining.

A successful bid by Ferruzzi would have made the Italian company the world's biggest sugar producer. But the Department of Trade and Industry halted the take-over battle by enging that heath hide over battle by saying that both bids "may be expected to operate against the public interest."

The department said in a statement that it was following recommendations of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, a govern-mental regulatory body.

Ferruzzi, a food and farms group that already dominates the European sugar industry, would have cap-tured about 24 percent of the Euro-pean Community sugar market if its bid had been approved.

Gruppo Ferruzzi announced in November that it had agreed to buy 70 percent of British Sugar, which has about 50 percent of the British sugar market. The bid, worth £425 million ($655 million), was accepted by S&W Berisford PLC, the commodity trading and processing group that owns British Sugar.

OPEC Worries Grow as Brent Falls Below $16

By Warren Getler

LONDON -The price of North Sea Brent crude, Britain's benchmark oil, fell below $16 a barrel Wednesday for the first time since mid-December, extending a retreat from the $18 fixed price set by OPEC late last year and renewing doubts about whether the cartel's pricing accord can be made to hold.

Traders said cargos of Brent for April delivery changed hands at $15.98 and $15.97 a barrel, down about 50 cents from Tuesday and $1.30 from Friday. In later trading. Brent was being quoted at $15.80 to $15.90 a barrel, with no trades at those levels, and the decline was continuing in U.S. markets.

EC Projects '87 Growth at Weak 2.3%

foreign banks.

By Peter Maass ional Herald Tribune

BRUSSELS - The European Community's executive body scaled back its forecast for 1987 growth to a rate to remain at 12 percent "at best," a level it called weak 2.3 percent Wednesday and warned that the "maccontable." unemployment rate would remain "unacceptable" at The European Commission said that prospects had grown gloomier in the past few months because of a sharp fall in the value of the U.S. dollar and a slowing in world trade, both of which will hart EC exports. The quarterly forecast indicates that the economy of the EC is expanding at a slower rate than in 1986, when growth in the overall gross domestic product of the 12 member nations was a singgish 2.5 percent. The commission's report followed a weekend meeting in Paris of finance ministers and central bankers from the six largest industrialized nations. The group set a vague plan for economic cooperation, including pledges to stabilize the dollar and boost growth in Japan and West Germany. Although the EC report was largely prepared before the weekend meeting, it echoed a widespread impa-tionce with the sketchiness of the currency pact and called for more concrete measures. An EC economist said that the commission believed that the accord needs more flesh."

"not very encouraging" that the EC would even reach its new growth target of 2.3 percent. It said that growth would allow the unemployment

Once again, the commission urged West Germany to play the part of economic "locomotive," a role that Bonn has rejected, by using fiscal and budgetary measures to fuel its economy. "It's in the German Federal Republic that the margin of maneuver appears to be the largest," the commission said.

The report suggested that West Germany advance tax cuts originally scheduled for Jan. 1, 1987, a step that Bonn said on Tuesday it would take. It also urged the country to increase spending in the public sector.

Bonn so far has resisted any measures that would increase its budget deficit and set off inflation France and Britain, the report said, could help carry the burden of stimulating growth by "improving their potential for production," even if it meant a slowing in the reduction of their budget deficits.

The commission's report said inflation would re-main low in the EC this year, with consumer prices rising by 3.2 percent after a 3.6 percent increase in

More broadly, the commission called for greater economic cooperation in the community, including In its annual economic report last autumn, the EC moves to shore up the European Monetary System. had projected 1987 growth at 2.8 percent. But the But it warned that the battered system could not be commission warned Wednesday that prospects were expected to carry the entire burden of cooperation.

Amid tension in financial markets Tuesday and a steady rise in the free-market rate for the U.S. dollar, some observers also anticipated that the new measures would either include a sharp devaluation of the austral, the Argentine currency, or an accelerated series of smaller devaluations.

After a 1.99 percent devaluation of the austral Tuesday, one of a series of periodic devaluations, the currency was quoted officially at 1.43 to the U.S. dollar. Bot the unofficial rate was 1.84, a difference of about 30 percent.

"People are waiting for the Tower Commission report, but we are also in the eighth week of an advance and, historically, the market undergoes a pullback after such a climb," said Ralph Bloch, senior vice president and chief market analyst at Raymond, James & Associates in St.

Petersburg.

He noted that in the past two days, the market's leadership has narrowed to some pharmaceutical issues and four blue-chip issues — Merck, American Can, General Electric and

NEW YORK -- Prices on the New York impact of the release of the Tower Commission "You can see from the even-keel sessions of the last several days that the market has lost its powerful momentum," Mr. Wachtel said. "That's only outural after a two-month climb. The bond market is weak, the dollar is weak, and prices are already 19 times earnings," Mr. Duquesne Light & Power was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up a bit.

American Motors was up slightly in active trading. Ford was up, but General Motors and Chrysier were lower.

H.F. Ahmanson was showing a modest gain. Merrill Lynch called the issue a strong buy.

Money center bank issues continued to weaken after Brazil's suspension of some interest payments. J.P. Morgan, Chase Manhattan, Bankers Trust and Manfacturers Hanover were all lower.

IBM was lower. On Tuesday, IBM's board increased a repurchase authorization by 4 million shares to a total of 19 million shares, or 3.1 percent of 1BM's approximately 610 million shares outstanding.

Among blue chips, AT&T was unchanged, but Merck, Union Carbide and General Electric

Prices of most oil company stocks weakened as oil futures prices on the New York Mercan-tile Exchange extended Tuesday's slide, Exxon, Texaco and Mobil were lower. Lorimar-Telepictures, Home Shopping Net-work and Amdahl topped the list of Amex

A Capital Idea: Protecting Your Profits in Gold.

Short-term gains in equities can quickly evaporate; that is the nature of paper investments. But the value of gold is intrinsic. And enduring. And the historical trend has always been up.

That is why the shrewdest of investors keep their capital constantly working, while locking up bard-won profits in gold.

For the full year, earnings were up 15 percent to 3.33 billion kronor from 2.9 billion in 1985, while sales rose 11 perceot to 35.2 billion kronor from 31.8 billion.

Saab-Scania's president, Georg Karnsund, attributed the gains almost entirely in improvements at the group's car and car-parts divi-

At the Saab car division, 1986 sales jumped a strong 17 percent, in 14.14 billion krooor, although earnings edged up just 3 percent, in 941 million kronor. The Scania division - which includes trucks. buses, auto parts and agency sales of Volkswagen and Audi cars in Sweden - boosted sales 12 percent to 15.22 billion kronor and profit 30 percent to 2.37 billion kronor

For the year, earnings were off at most other divisions, with the aircraft sector swinging into a loss of 33 million kronor compared with a profit of 106 million kronor in 1985.

Mr. Karnsund said, however, that sales and earnings for the SF-340 midsize commuter aircraft were rising, with 12 aircraft delivered in December alone, for a total of 37 during 1986.

Mr. Karnsund said management had proposed a dividend of 16 kronor, up from 14 kronor in 1985, plus a bonus of 2 kronor to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of Saab.

IBM Unveils 4-Megabit Chip, Increases Shares in Buyback

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches

NEW YORK - loternational Business Machines Corp. said Wednesday it had designed a computer chip capable of storing more than four million bits of data, four times as much as any chip in use. 1BM said four-megabit chip has been made on the same line used in produce one million-bit chips at its plant in Essex Junction, Vermont.

The new chip is in only 35 percent larger than the one-megabit chip. In a separate development Tuesday, IBM said it would buy back an additional 4 million shares, with a current value of about $570 million, beyond the 15 million shares announced last year. Analysis said the stock buybacks, representing 3.1 percent of IBM's 610 million shares. were a way for it to use its strong cash flow and help raise the price of the stock to benefit shareholders.

IBM stock, which hit a low of $115.75 in January, was down slightly midday Wednesday, to $142.875 from $143. (Reuters, UPI, AP)

Analysts Say ICI Will Post £1 Billion Pretax Profit

LONDON — Imperial Chemical Industries PLC is expected to gost a pretax profit Thursday of more than £1 billion ($1.54 billion) for 1986, a gain of at least 11 percent from the previous year, industry analysts said Wednes-

The analysts said that ICI, the world's fifthlargest chemical company in sales, was among the blue-chip stocks that have attracted American buyers during the surge in the British stock market in recent weeks.

In ICI's case, the market was reappraising the company's pharmaceuticals division. ICI's share price surged to about 145.8 pence early Thursday on the London Stock Exchange from 105.9 pence at the start of trading.

Analysts see ICI's steadily expanding pharmaceuticals activities as a key area for profit growth in the 1990s.

But improved margins and restructuring in its more traditional chemicals, petrochemicals and plastics businesses also likely helped ICI reach a pretax profit of £1.01 billion to £1.05 billion in 1986, analysts estimated, an increase of about 11 m 15 percent from £912 millioo in

The company's pretax profit declined in 1985 from record earnings of £1.03 billion io 1984. Analysts predict that its pretax profit will rise to at least £1.3 billion in 1987.

Sir John Harvey-Jones, who took over as ICI chairman in 1982, has steered the company away from its early emphasis oo bulk chemicals toward a focus on profitable high-value specialty products, which are less vulnerable to currency and oil price swings.

But last year, it was the weaker dollar and lower energy and feedstock costs that helped boost earnings in many of ICI's activities, including fiber, industrial and specialty chemi-cals, the brokerage Barclays de Zoete Wedd

They said that such factors would swell profit in ICI's petrochemical and plastics business by more than 100 percent in £195 million to £220 million, up from £97 million in 1985. Profit in the general chemical sector was expected to rise by at least 20 percent, to £170 million to £180 million, from £138 million in 1985.

But analysts pointed out that there was little room for growth in the volume of the chemicals and petrochemicals sectors.

Growth in pharmaceuticals offers more po-tential, said Martin Evans, an analyst with Broker County Securities. Il a oumber ol drugs now to the research and development stage are introduced by ICI as expected in the 1990s, he said, the products could contribute as much as 45 to 50 percent to pretax profits instead of the current one-third.

Dollar Mixed in Lackluster Trading

LONDON — The dollar ended mixed but little changed Wednesday in dull European trading, and dealers said they expected few mafor corrency movements before U.S. trade figures are released on

They said market sentiment was hearish on the dollar because of nervousness about Brazil's suspension of interest payments on part of its foreign debt and fears that the release Thursday of the Tower Commission report on U.S. arms sales to Iran could further weaken the U.S. administration.

But operators were hesitant to push the dollar lower in light of last weekend's Paris agreement to sta-bilize currencies. Although the meaning of the accord was unclear, dealers said they feared that central banks would intervene if the dollar began to slide.

In London, the dollar closed at 1.8275 Deutsche marks, dowo slightly from Tuesday's close of 1.8350 DM, and at 153.60 yen, al-most unchanged from 153.78.

The British pound, meanwhile, came under some pressure during the day as prices of spot Brent crude oil fell to less than $16 a barrel for the first time since December. Sterling closed almost unchanged against the dollar, at $1.5385 compared with $1.5392.

Operators said the dollar rose against the Deutsche mark in late afternoon trading on some position squaring and interbank orders, but held to an extremely narrow range for most of the day.

Friday's U.S. trade figures were expected to provide some direction for dollar trading. Dealers are expecting a January deficit of $13 billion to $14.5 billion, after a surprisingly low deficit in December of $10.7 billion. London Dollar Rates 1,8275 1,5365 153,60 1,5383 4,0625

The dollar could come under renewed pressure if the deficit is above $14 billion, as the market would want to test the strength of the Paris accord by the six major odustrial countries to keep the dollar at current levels, traders said. U.S. durable goods orders data for January, postponed from Tues- Swiss francs, down from 1.5540 day to Thursday, were expected to Dealers were also anxiously watching developments in Brazil's debt position and said the longterm effects on the dollar and the U.S. economy would be profound if Brazil decided to end interest payments on its foreign debt.

In earlier European trading, the dollar was fixed in Frankfurt at 1.8248 DM, down from 1.8388 at Tuesday's fixing, and in Paris at 6.0740 French francs, down from 6.1215.

Mitterrand Supports G-7

The Associated Press PARIS - President François Mitterrand said Wednesday that Italy and Canada should be included whenever major Western nations discuss mone tary affairs.

Italy refused to participate in Sunday's meeting in Paris of financial officials from six countries, saying central points had been decided the previous day by the Group of Five - the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan. The G-5 plus Italy and Canada make up the Group of Seven.

Kaufman Sees Fall in U.S. Discount Rate, Dollar

TOKYO — Henry Kaufman, chief economist at Salomon Brothers Inc., said Wednesday he expects at least one more half-point cut in the key U.S. discount rate by midyear, and the dollar to resume its decline in the next few

Mr. Kaufman, whose opinions for the large U.S. investment bank are widely followed by financial markets, said at a news conference be would not be surprised if the dollar fell to 140 yen and 1.70 Deutsche marks by the end of this year. The U.S. currency now is trading around 153.65 year and 1.83 DM.

However, he said, the dollar's current stability will last for the next month or two as the markets pause after the U.S. currency's fall over the past one and a half years.

The 5.5 percent discount rate, the benchmark for other U.S. rates, may not be cut within the next month, he added. But by midyear it would be cut by a half-point to stimulate sluggish U.S. and world economic activity, without fear of reviving inflation.

Io the United States, he added, the only way to stimulate the economy is through the Federal Reserve's monetary policy. While a reduction in the U.S. government's budget deficit would help lower U.S. interest rates, B sharp cut in the deficit could pose dangers for the slowing U.S. and world economies.

The reduction would need to be gradual, be said, because the U.S. economy is not fundamentally strong enough to adjust.

A U.S. monetary policy is still needed that can immediately offset a reduction in fiscal stimulus with an effective measure of monetary injection, he added.

Mr. Kaufman said concern about a sharp decline in the dollar comes mostly from the Federal Reserve, rather than the U.S. Treasury. because the currency's fall could disrupt capital flows into the United States from abroad, particularly from Japan and West Germany.

A sudden drop could also disrupt global financial activity, he said, adding that this may be the underlying reason the United States was willing to attend last weekend's meeting in Paris called by the seven major industrial de-mocracies, the so-called Group of Seven. Yet Mr. Kaufman said last weekend's Paris meeting did not address the complex issue of how to manage the new financial world where there are massive movements of funds because of economic differences, regulations and inno-

Those movements have a substantial impact on the value of financial assets, interest rates and currency pacts, be said. "I think the G-7 meeting was helpful, but I think the G-7 meeting is not going to cure the problems that today are the impediments to economic expansion."

THE EUROMARKETS

Floating-Rate Sector Still in the Spotlight

LONDON - Most sectors of the Eurobond market again closed steady Wednesday, but attention remained focused on the floatingrate-oote sector, dealers said. The perpetual area of the market again remained effectively closed with most houses willing to trade only oo an indicated basis.

However, in the dated FRN sec-tor, U.S. banks suffered a renewed bout of selling from investors who are still nervous after Friday's news that Brazil was suspending interest payments on its foreign debt, dealers said. Traders noted that FRNs for U.S. banks have always been vulnerable to concern over Latin American debt exposure. They're the ones that lent so much money. It's obvious their paper's going to be sold when problems emerge," one trader said.

by op to a full point, although some traders felt that the market would recover shortly.

One new FRN was launched, although dealers said it was essentially a publicly marketed asset-swap that would probably not trade widely on the secondary market. The $150 million oose was issued by Nomura International Ltd. on behalf of a company incorporated in the Cayman Islands called Lives Ltd. The five-year bond pays 14 point over the six-month Londoo interbank offered rate.

It was quoted on the when-issued market above the par issue price at about 100.03. The issue pays total fees of 10 basis points.

Otherwise, activity on the primary market was quiet after Tuesday's batch of new issues. The day's only dollar straight was a $100 million bond for the Queensland govern-Prices of some bank names fell meot's development authority guaranteed by the State of Queens-land.

It was seen by some dealers as being a little on the tight side, but it closed the day only just outside the total fees of 1% percent at a discount of 1 15/16 percent. The lead manager was Credit Suisse First Boston Ltd.

The recent steady flow of new yen offerings continued with a 20 billioo yeo bond for France's Caisse Nationale des Télécommunications. The seven-year issue pays 5% percent and was priced at 102%. The lead manager was 1BJ International Ltd. It ended within the 1% percent fees. Back in the secondary markets, the dollar-straight market ended unchanged to a touch firmer, with prices tending higher during the afternoon on the back of firmer bond prices in the United States, dealers said.

PEUGEOT: Restructuring and Automation Give a New Reason to Roar

(Continued from first finance page) geot last year gave little ground in Europe, despite an onslaught by the Japanese automakers. In 17 West European countries, Citroën and Paugeot sales together climbed 7 percent to 1.3 million and represented 11.3 percent of all cars sold, down from 11.5 percent in 1985 and 1984. That put Peugeot in fourth place among Europe's six largest auto producers in terms of volume behind Volkswagen/Audi/SEAT, Fiat SpA and Ford Motor Co. and ahead of General Motors Corp. and Renault, the No. 1 French car maker. Behind the overall market-share figures, however, were important gains for Peugeot in West Germany and Britain, the two largest auto markets in Europe. In Britain, Peugoot's unit sales soared 79 percent. almost doubling its share to 4.3 percent, while Citroen registrations rose by 25 percent, giving it 1.8 percent of that market. In Germacars, reaching 3 percent of the mar-ket, while Citroen's sales climbed by 25 percent, gaining 1.6 percent of the market.

To achieve those gains, Jean Boillot, president of the Peugeot division, told journalists last month that the company made B strategic choice to pull back in France and divert production to faster-growing export markets.

As a result, Pengeot's penetra-tion in France fell almost three percentage points to 31.9 percent, putliog it oeek-aod-oeck with government-owned Renault.

"If Pengeot played the European card, it's oot to obtain immediate profits, but to build its position for the longer term," be said.

Much of Peugeot's turnsround can be attributed to the success of the Pageot 205 — a "supermini," in industry parlance — which accounted for almost a third of Peageot's unit sales last year. The model, introduced in 1983, is now 103,600 francs.

Industry analysts say Peugeot found success with the 205 because it debuted with a wide range of options, such as a five-door version, that could satisfy a larger segment of the market. Timing was also important, as the 205 came out

And last fall Peugeot stirred up excitement in the industry with its introduction of the Citroen AX supermini. Produced at a highly roboticized factory in Aulnay, the AX is Mr. Calver's gamble against conventional wisdom that money can still be made on small cars.

The car - priced at 43,400 to 65,000 francs - got off to a slow start, reaching only half of projected sales in France by the end of the year. Nevertheless, Citroën has begun rolling out the model in other countries, and it is aiming to sell the 405 and 505 toward establishsioos, priced from 46,900 to or about 2 percent of the market, Meanwhile, Peugeor is committed to boosting its presence io the U.S. market, where annual sales of the Peugeot luxury class model 505 bave been languishing around 15,000 units in the past few years. A oew lineup of engines for the 505, as well as the introduction of a just as interest was waning in Renault's R5, a comparably sized year, will provide the armunition for Peugeot to hit its target of 50,000 cars by 1990, according to Peugeot's sales director, Victor Dial.

Industry observers are skeptical, however. Paul Capella, a Parisbased automotive industry consul-tant with DRI Europe, said it would be difficult for Pengeot to build an image in the United States with a midrange family car. "It's a rather half-hearted way to approach the American market." Mr. Capella said, adding that a sporty versioo of the popular 205 would have gone much further than 230,000 AX cars in Europe in 1987, ing the brand in the United States.

Now we are to get the rest. Andrew McNeil-lie has edited all of Virginia WoolPs non-liction newspaper and magazine pieces that he was able to trace, in a collection that will come to six volumes. They will include about 500 essays and reviews, roughly twice the number selected by Leonard Woolf. In the first volume, McNeillie's diligence is particularly evident: Eighty-three of the 109 selections have never appeared in book form.

The reason, of course, is that the material is drawn from Woolf's first eight years as a free-lancer. A good deal of it is trivia and of little interest other than the kind that delights in contemplating Napoleon's waistcoat buttons.

Much of the first volume, and a preponderance of the pieces done between 1904 and 1906, are either brief three- or four-paragraph reviews of forgettable books written for the Times of London Literary Supplement, or longer reviews and essays written for the Guardian — not what was then called the plot summaries of such perishables as A.J. Dawson's "The Fortunes of F rthings," a novel about a young man shanghaied by pirates and sold to the Sultan of Morocco. Even more conscientiously, McNeillie searches out the book and gives us page citations for each of the quotes. Why? Is someone going to try to read "The Fortunes of Farthings"? Scholarship has its mysteries.

Woolf squeezes to find invisible virtues in the books she was given, but it is the invisibility she transmits, not the virtues. Later, still observing the conventions, she learns to put teeth in her smile.

And here we come to one of the interests of the collection: We see Woolf's literary bone structure emerge from the baby fat. Even while turning out the puffs, she would write scathing comments about the same books to a friend, and refer to herself by her private nickname "Goat." Gradually, never loosing her delicacy, she began to offer public glimpses of this private goeL

Even early on, a phrase stands out here and there. In a stilted essay about a dog, here is an obvious thought expressed in a family disturbing fashion: "We deliberately transplant a little bit of simple wild life, and make it grow up beside ours, which is neither simple nor wild." An early review of "The Golden Bowl" projects her a long way ahead of herself. She commares James to a painter who painstakingcompares James to a painter who painstaking-ly sets down every muscle and bone. He would be greater "if he were content to say less and suggest more."

And by 1907, about 50 selections into the book, Woolf has all but dropped the Guardian, is doing longer pieces for The Times, and is coming into her prime. Her essay on Thomas Hood declares her belief that literary portraiture can find its richest subjects in secondary figures: "Keats lived in a street and had a neighbor and his neighbor had a family."

The rewards multiply. Reviewing two travel books, she argues that it takes a stranger to write properly about a place. Natives are too

"Oxford Street, Kensington Gardens, Piccadilly - the names of these places alone rouse so many echoes, the sight of them is so confused with a multimde of other sites, that a Cockney who should sit down to describe them might end with an essay upon party government or a dissertation upon the immortality of Her touching and celebrated portrait of Louise de la Valhère, a mistress of Louis XIV, comes in here. So does the imperious Lady Holland, who ruled her salon with a sharp tongue, and who once thundered at an eminent and overly talkative guest: "Enough of this, Macaulay!

DALLAS - The National Collegiste Athletic Association on Wednesday suspended the football program at Southern Methodist University for one year and said the school could play no home football games in 1988.

The governing body of college athletics thus enforced its so-called "death penalty" for the first time, providing the severest sanctions in its history against the country's most scandal-ridden football program. "Not only is Southern Methodist University a repeat violator, but its past record of violations is nothing short of abysmal," said a statement issued by the NCAA's committee on infractions, "Both the current case and the university's 1985 infractions case involved major violations that following that season. occurred at times when the university was on NCAA probation for pre-ous serious violations." The NCAA cited a series of violations involving payment of mon-ey to athletes, including one in permitted to resume normal prac-received payments totaling $47,000 during the 1985-86 academic year and eight athletes got payments to-taling about $14,000 from September through December 1986. At a special meeting last summer, the NCAA adopted regulations that allowed it to suspend an athletic program if it violated NCAA regulations while on probation.

The sanctions include: SMU will be on probation until Sept. 1, 1990.

SMU will be allowed in play no football games in 1987 and will be limited to seven games in 1988 - all away from home. SMU will be allowed oo live television appearances in 1988 and no bowl appearances immediately Football practice during 1987 tice activities in the spring of 1988.

No recruiting may take place by football staff members until Aug. 1, 1988.
School officials have said they will not appeal the NCAA fundings.
SMU is the first school to fall under recently passed bylaws that allow the NCAA to suspend an athletic program for up to two years. Such action can be taken when a program is judged to have violated NCAA regulations while already on probation.

SMU already was the most penalized school in NCAA history, the latest punishment being its fifth in the last 12 years. The football program was placed on probation twice in the last six years, 1981 and 1985, and the Mustangs' first brush with the NCAA was in 1958, when they were put on probation for a year.

Although the NCAA released its findings Wednesday, there will apparently be no release of the names of those involved. SMU officials have said the identities of those violating NCAA regulations will be kept secret because they could oot have gathered the information they did without promising anonymity. There were also indications that the names of those involved have

One Baseball Owner's Impeccable Logic

NEW YORK - When Don Mattingly had the cerve to win his arbitration case against the New York Yankees, George Steinbrenner, the team's principal owner and The True Sportsman, fumed and sported.

"He's like all the rest of them now," said The True Sportsman, "He can't play little Jack Armstrong of Evansville, Indiana. He goes into the category of modern-player-with-agent looking for the bucks. Money means everything to him." The implication is that Mattingly is a wrongheaded no-goodnik, and don't invite him to dinner because he'll swipe the candelabra. Fact is, Mattingly is a professional baseball player, who, under the terms of the collective bargaining agreement between the Players Association and the owners, is given a right to seek salary arbitration.

Steinbrenner further implies that he is no! a money-grubber like Mattingly. For Steinbrenner, certainly, is hardly in baseball for the money. That makes him an amateur owner, which confirms the suspicions of many. Now, when The True Sportsman lost the case —his figure was $1.7 million a year to Mattingly's $1.975 million -he didn't sit back and say. O.K., congratulations, Don, and good luck." The True Sportsman railed that the arbitrator was a burn and "probably never wore a jockstrap in his life." Of course, it's not imperative for one to have batted against Fernando Valenzuela in order to rule on the relative merits of a ballplayer, just as one doesn't need a pilot's license to decide a labor dispute in the aircraft industry. The arbitrator in the Mattingly case was Arvid Anderson. If Steinbrenner believed Anderson was too incompetent to arbitrate a baseball question, be had plenty of time to say so. He didn't, meaning he either believed Anderson's creden-

he could do nothing but spit sour grapes. An arbitrator may be removed from initial consideration if either side doesn't want him. No reasons are necessary. Then they decide on Certainly Carter was the sole reason the New York Mets won the title, and Keith Hernandez, Ray Knight, Wally Backman, Len Dykstra, Darryl Strawberry, Dwight Gooden, Ron Dar-ling, Bobby Ojeda, and Jesse Orosco, to oame a few, were superfluous, like tailbones.

As for Jackson, it is beyond question that he single-handedly won the championship for the Yankees in 1977 and 1978. In 1977, he batted 286, with 32 home runs and 110 runs batted in. All right, so Graig Nettles had 37 homers and 107 RBIs, Thurmon Munson hit 308 with 100 RBIs, Chris Chambliss had 17 homers and 90 RBIs, Lou Piniella hit 330, Ed Figueroa and Ron Guidry won 16 games, Don Gullett was 14-4 and Sparky Lyle had a 2.17 earned-rum average. Insignificant. Everyone knows they were nothing more than Jackson's cheerleaders and bootblacks.

The same in 1978, when Jackson's numbers fell somewhat, 10 .274, with 27 homers and 97 RBIs, nearly the same, coincidentally, as Nettles (.276, 27 and 93). Guidry was only 25-3, Figueroa won 20, Catfish Hunter was 12-6, Rich Gossage led the league in saves, and Willie Randolph and Mickey Rivers were at the top of the batting order and played solid defense. But the True Sportsman knows that Mattingly, like Reggie and Rambo, must do it alone. We'll see, although Mattingly in the last two years has tried mightily: His figures in 1985 were a .324 batting average, 35 homers, 145 RBIs, and last year they were .352, 31 and 113. He also played superbly afield. His statistics were superior to Jackson's in his championship seasons in the Bronx. Perhaps Mattingly could two effective free agents whom Steinbrenner refused to deal with this winter.

Now Going to the Dogs Can Be Tax-Deductible

By Andrew Beyer Washington Pass Service
WASHINGTON — When

Robert Grotzinger lost his inb with a trucking company in 1978, he tried to support himself by betting on dog races.

According to the U.S. government, which would later take a keen interest in his activities. Grotzinger "devoted about half his waking hours to gambling at tracks in Florida and Colorado." At the end of the year, he filed a tax remm that indicated be was a professional bettor Grotzinger quickly ran afoul of the Internal Revenue Service, which argued that an individual could not be engaged in the business of gambling — thus altering the computation of his taxes. Not a great deal of moncy was involved (the IRS was trying to collect $2,521.89), but the case was in the courts for years because a larger principle vas at stake.

Oo Tuesday, Grotzinger scored a historic victory. By a 6-to-3 vote, the Supreme Court took his side and ruled that he was engaged in a business as a full-time gambler.

The decision opens the way for gamblers to deduct legitimate business expenses (the cost of racing forms and travel to the track, for example) and may give them some other tax advantages. It does not permit them to deduct gambling losses on their taxes, but the ruling may have other far-reaching consequences.

"This decision goes beyond the issue of gambling," said Tom Aronson, director of legislation for the American Horse Council. "The court has chosen lo establish another standard by which a person is held to be engaged in a business."

The old definition of what constitutes a business or profession had great importance for gamblers in the 1970s and early 1980s, because it enabled the IRS to zing them with an outrageons catch-22.

According to the IRS, the proper way to show gambling transactions on a tax return was to list total winnings as income and lotal losses as a deduction, If a gambler bet $400,000 during the course of the year and made a $1,000 profit, he would show $401,000 in income and a deduction of $400,000. Sirens would sound and red lights would start flashing when the IRS computer got a look at such a tax return, of course.

mhler was socked for a hefty "alternative minimum tax" because the IRS viewed that $400,000 dednetion as if it were some dubious tax shelter rather than a genuine business ex-

In Grutzinger's case, the fig-ures were less dramatie. He showed gambling income of $70,000 and losses of $72,032 in 1978. But regardless of the amounts, the IRS would not view gambling losses as legiti-mate expenses because it held that gambling was oot a busi-

The IRS relied on an old Supreme Court decision that de-lined a trade or business as "the holding out of goods or services to others." Professional gamblers couldn't meet that standard, nor could certain other types of businessmen - for example, people who devoted most of their time to managing their own stock-market investments.

Some courts were willing to take a more liberal view of what constituted a business, saying in essence that if something looked like a duck, walked like a duck and quacked like a duck it must be a duck. Other courts cited legal precedent to insist that it wasn't a duck.

The Grotzinger case has re solved the longstanding dis-pute. Wrate Justice Harry Blackmun: "If a taxpayer devotes his full-time activity to gambling, and it is his intended livelihood source, it would seem that basic concepts of fairness (if there be much of that in the income tax law) demand that his activity be regarded as a trade or business just as any other readily accepted activity.

The ruling apparently has no effect on the statutory restriction that says gambling losses can only be deducted to the extent of gambling winnings. Moreover, stopping the IRS from using the alternative minimum tax against gamblers had already been accomplished by a tax-law change passed by Congress in 1982.

But the ruling will permit gamblers to take substantial deductions as business expenses. It should allow them to invest part of their gambling winnings retirement funds.

Most of all, the court has conferred legitimacy to the business of gambling. Bettors can come out of the closet.

Nancy Reaches Out

WASHINGTON — There's don't you pack your bags and take trouble at the White House, the next $39 United flight to Syraand it has to do with communication. I have in my hand the transcript of a telephone conversation between Don Regan and Nancy

NANCY: Don, can we talk? DON: I told you never to call me at the office. What is it this time? NANCY: I want to know why you don't send me flowers any

DON: Because I'm trying to run the White House and you keep butting in with some crazy idea about the president to make my life NANCY: I don't believe I'm Buchwald

out of line by objecting to you sending Ronnie down the Snake River on a raft two weeks after his prostate operation. DON: The president has a lot of admirers along the Snake River.

NANCY: You don't care about Ron. All you're trying to do is make an abrasive name for yourself. DON: If you keep talking like that I'm going to put you on

NANCY: If you put me on HOLD I'll sic my dog on you. DON: Nancy, you have to stay out of the Oval Office. Women just doo't belong there. NANCY: Listen, worm, we had a very nice White House until you took over as chief of staff. Why

Yehudi Menuhin Joins British Order of Merit

LONDON — The violinist Sir Yehudi Menuhin, 70, has been made a member of the Order of Merit, one of the highest honors conferred by the British monarchy, Buckingham Palace announced.

The Order of Merit, founded in 1902 by King Edward VII, consists of 24 members at any given time. Menuhin's appointment fills one of the vacancies created by the death of the sculptor Henry Moore and Harold Macmillan, the former prime minister.

DON: Stick to baking birthday cakes and leave the business of running the country to me.

NANCY: Why don't you stuff your Touchtone in your ear? DON: That does it Now I am going to hang up on you.

NANCY: You wouldn't dare bang up on the first lady. If you did you'd wind up as our next ambassador to Iran.

DON: The president has assured me my job with him is safe. After the Tower report he needs me more than ever.

NANCY: Why does the presideat need you? DON: Because I'm the only one who tells him what he said and why NANCY: Ronnie doesn't have to know anything. All be has to do is be himself.

DON: Are you finished? I have work to do to save the country from the horrible mess we got it into. NANCY: I want to know why you attacked me for supporting the president's new communications chief because he was a cub Nazi wheo he was 10 years old. DON: I didn't attack you - I attacked the East Wing of the White House where you work. All I said was the East Wing was stupid, incompetent and interfered in West Wing business

NANCY: Do you know what I spect, Donald Regan? You're trying to get me to resign as the first lady so you can have Ronnie all to DON; It's not true. I know the president respects you very much and it's my job to make sure he never has to choose between us. lo the meantime I think I'll hang up NANCY: Doo't you dare hang up on me. I was talking to Ronnie last night and we thought it would be nice if you took a private office next to Michael Deaver's. In that way you'd still be near to us and at the same time he out of our hair. DON: Nancy, may I ask you personal question? Why are you calling me? NANCY: It's no mystery the dephone company wants us all to reach out and touch someone we

Musical 'Food For the Soul'

By Andrew Clark

BERN — When the Soviet conductor Dmitri Kitayenko first visited Switzerland in 1982, he took musicians and audiences by storm. Half dictator, half sensitive musician harnessing the emotional charge of a Tchaikovsky symphony, he goaded the Bern Symphony Orchestra into one of its best concerts of the
